

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface	9
---------------	---

I. Introductory Remarks

Ondřej Ševeček

1. The Case of Company Towns of the Baťa Concern	15
1.1. Introduction	15
1.2. Reflecting on the topic of period discussions, their second life, and the current state of understanding.....	16
1.3. Company towns of the Baťa concern in the coordinates of contemporary research	26
1.4. The Baťa concern – character of growth, structure, and its transformations.....	33
1.5. On the genesis of the Baťa model of company towns: conditions and circumstances, premises and influences.....	36
1.6. “The ideal industrial town” – on the systematization of the concern’s program at the end of the 1930s.....	39
1.7. Conclusion.....	45

II. Reflecting on Baťa’s History

Martin Marek, Vít Strobach

1. Identity, Discipline and Order in the Baťa Concern	51
1.1. The employee – selection, records, control	53
1.2. Body and character	54
1.3. Moral decline and its treatment	55
1.4. Images and metaphors. The Baťa collective.....	56
1.5. ... and its enemies.....	58
1.6. Epilogue.....	60

Zachary Doleshal

2. Imagining Baťa in the World of Tomorrow: The Baťa Company, Czechoslovakia, and the 1939 New York World’s Fair	61
2.1. Historiography	63
2.2. Baťa’s Place in The World of Tomorrow	65
2.3. A Fair after Munich?.....	71
2.4. The Orphan Pavilion.....	74

Antonie Doležalová
3.	Baťa's Search for Social Reconciliation in the Changing World of Social Justice 83
3.1.	Introduction 83
3.2.	Baťa's concept of social reconciliation..... 84
3.3.	Baťa and his era 85
3.3.1.	The era of the Habsburg monarchy 85
3.3.2.	The First-Republic era 87
3.4.	Baťa's sources of inspiration 88
3.4.1.	Life experiences..... 89
3.4.2.	American experiences..... 90
3.4.3.	The socioeconomic theories of the time 91
3.4.3.1.	The origins of Czech economic thinking 92
3.4.3.2.	Cooperative ownership 93
3.4.3.3.	Laboretism 95
3.4.4.	Social concepts of the time 96
3.5.	Conclusion 99
 III. Baťa Towns – Case Studies
Martin Jemelka
1.	Ottmuth (Otmět): A German Outpost of Batism?..... 103
1.1.	Establishment of the company Deutsche Schuh-Aktiengesellschaft Bata, Berlin (1928–1930) 103
1.2.	Deutsche Schuh-Aktien Gesellschaft Bata, Ottmuth A.G. (1930–1938)..... 105
1.3.	OTA Schlesische Schuh-Werke Ottmuth A.G. (1938–1945)..... 110
1.4.	Economic development of the companies Deutsche Schuh-Aktien Gesellschaft Bata, Ottmuth and OTA, Schlesische Schuh-Werke Ottmuth, A.G. (1930–1945)..... 114
1.4.1.	Footwear sales network 114
1.4.2.	Footwear production at the Ottmuth factory 115
1.5.	Construction development of the factory premises (1931–1945) 118
1.6.	Bata-Siedlung 121
1.7.	Postwar development and OTA's position in the Polish economy 124
1.8.	Conclusion 128
 Tobias Ehrenbold
2.	Putting Möhlin on the Map: The Swiss Baťa Town as an Integral Part of the Company's National Image 129
2.1.	A crisis-ravaged village 130
2.2.	A colorful bouquet of enemies..... 132
2.3.	Baťa's road to the status of a Swiss product..... 133
2.4.	Möhlin as a new center 134
2.5.	Baťa applies an imageological bricolage..... 136

2.6.	What days should one celebrate?.....	136
2.7.	What language should one speak?.....	138
2.8.	What advertising should one use?	139
2.9.	What occasions should one support?.....	140
2.10.	From expansion to production stoppage.....	143
2.11.	Conclusion.....	144

Ol'ga Kvasnicová

3.	Baťa in Ponitrie: On the development of the Slovak company towns of Velké Bošany and Baťovany (today Partizánske).....	147
----	--	-----

Božena Malovcová

4.	The Establishment and Development of the Baťa Factory in Svit (1934–1945).....	157
----	--	-----

Elisabeth van Meer

5.	Modernity on “Brabant’s Heath”: Building Batadorp in the Netherlands, 1933–1959.....	165
5.1.	North-Brabant before Batadorp: Consumer Goods Production and an Export-Oriented Infrastructure, 1800–1932.....	166
5.2.	Dutch Company Towns before Batadorp: The Modernity of Agnetapark, Heveadorp, Philipsdorp and Drents Dorp, 1880–1932	169
5.3.	Batadorp in North-Brabant: Becoming a Catholic Parish with a New Neighbor, 1933–1959.....	175
5.4.	Postscript: Batadorp Today.....	177

Eric J. Jenkins

6.	“A Bit of Europe in Maryland”: The Baťa Colony in Belcamp	179
6.1.	Introduction	179
6.2.	Raison d’être.....	179
6.3.	Location.....	180
6.4.	Town Design.....	182
6.5.	Construction.....	183
6.6.	Factory Buildings	183
6.7.	Community Center or Společenský dům.....	184
6.8.	Houses	185
6.9.	School Building	186
6.10.	Postwar Belcamp	186
6.11.	Organized Labor and American Labor Laws.....	187
6.12.	Conclusion.....	188

Deborah Woodman

7.	Batawa: A Canadian Company Town Not Quite Like the Others	189
----	---	-----

	Michal Novotný
8.	Jaroslav Fragner and the Unrealized Project of an Industrial Town in Kolín-Zálabí	201

IV. Architecture and Urbanism

	Theresa Adamski
1.	Baťa's Zlín – Space for the Individual Collective?	221
1.1.	Family houses – a new type of housing	225
1.2.	The women's role in the family houses	226
1.3.	Mechanization of the household	228
1.4.	Making architecture scientific	229
1.5.	Transformation of the floor plans	231
1.6.	The new pattern – aesthetics	235
1.7.	Competition within the collective	236
1.8.	Work collectively, live individually	238
1.9.	Visibility	241
1.10.	Public – private	242
1.11.	The factory as role model	244
1.12.	Conclusion	247
	Kimberly Elman Zarecor
2.	Zlín and the Invention of the Panel Building	249
	Alena Kubová
3.	Baťovany / Partizánske: A Contribution to the Concept of the Functional City	259
	Markéta Březovská
4.	The Role of Brands in the Production of Space: The Urban Footprints of Baťa, Nike, and Volkswagen	263
4.1.	Volkswagen town	264
4.2.	Niketowns	265
4.3.	Baťa Towns	267
4.4.	The Baťa town of Batanagar	269
4.5.	Conclusion	278
	List of Authors	281
	Bibliography	283
	List of Archives and Archival Fonds	293
	List of Illustrations	295
	Abbreviations	299
	Editors' Note	301
	Index of Names	303
	Index of Localities	309